Bob Ingersoll says Mr. Conkling made the smallest effort of his life when he resigned.

It would be a splendid joke on Senator Platt if the New York Legislature would "leave him standing in the rain."

Ex-Senator Howe made a speech before the International Monetary conference, in Paris, yesterday, and favored bimetalism.

Our Tom. Nichol and Senator Conkling are having a controversy in the New York newspapers. Just think of it, Nichol and Conkling!

The President has a remarkably stalwart backbone, and it should be used in running the government without any conniving with Mr. Blaine.

The resignation of Mr. Conkling did not change things at the White House. The flag is still there. So is the malaria which comes about every summer.

Before Mr. Conkling finishes his political career he will learn, probably much to his surprise, that no one man is necessary to the success of this government.

It is an ill-wind that blows no one good. The Republicans can turn aside from the Washington sensation—which is an unfortunate one—and yet smile to think that Gorham is politically dead.

Strikers seldom gain their point when they strike, and beside that they lose their time during the strike. The switchmen who struck in Chicago have seen the hopelessness of their case, and a majority of them have resumed work at the old wages.

It is said that the constitutionality of the Kansas prohibition law will be tested in the United States courts. The brewers' association of the United States has given $75,000 to pay expenses. This will be a good thing for lawyers, and then it won't hurt the prohibition law any.

The happiest paper in the West is the Evening Wisconsin, which has come out with flying colors in the libel suit begun against it by a lawyer in Milwaukee by the name of Finch. The people are on the side of the Wisconsin in this controversy. The paper has certainly won a proud victory.

Some Republicans in Milwaukee telegraphed to the Legislature of New York on Tuesday, in regard to Conkling and Platt, as follows: "They are now out. Let them stay out. Harmony must be preserved." One hundred guns would be fired in every State in the Union if the New York Legislature would leave them both out.

Mr. Thomas C. Platt is a second edition of B. Gratz Brown. Brown was down in history as the tag to Mr. Greeley's coat tail in the great campaign of 1872; and Platt will be known as the tag to Conkling's coat tail in 1881. He comes and goes, and acts and speaks at the back of the proud and dictatorial Senator from New York.

The President, it will be remembered, gave the Conklinites 11 appointments in New York, and the anti-Conklinites only 1. When Secretary Blaine was preparing his remarkable monograph on the history and habits of the American hog, the Conklinites imagined the Secretary of State was making a direct thrust at them.

The President was not in the least disturbed when he heard that Conkling had resigned. Among other things he said "the sun would continue to rise and set just as if he hadn't resigned." This is true, and probably Mr. Conkling will be very much surprised to think that the world will move on all the same after he stepped out of the Senate.

The director of the United States Mint has made an estimate that the total gold in circulation in this country including the bullion in the treasury, amounts to $520,000,000, of which $264,000,000 is held as treasury and bank reserves, and $256,000,000 is in actual circulation. Since July, 1879, there has been a total gain of gold to the country, of $234,000,000, and of this amount $140,000,000 has gone into circulation.

The board of control which is to have the management of all our State institutions, have had a meeting at Madison to discuss the line of policy to be pursued by the board. No definite conclusions were reached, we apprehend, nor can there be any till the board gets a little practical experience. When the Governor made the appointments he did not designate the term of office to any of the appointees, leaving that matter to be settled among themselves. Lots were drawn for the terms which resulted as follows: Charles Luling, for one year; James Benthoff, two years; Charles D. Parker, three years; George W. Bureland, four years; and Lewis A. Proctor, five years. There are numerous applicants for the position of secretary of the board, but up to the present time the board could not agree on any one person. It is said, however, that Mr. Patton, the expert bookkeeper under the board of investigation, will probably be the successful candidate. The salary will likely be placed at $2,000 a year.

Mr. Conkling might learn wisdom from the words of the lamented Charles Sumner. When Mr. Sumner was suffering under the displeasure of Grant's administration, and when the Senators had combined against him to displace him from the head of the committee on foreign affairs, a position he filled with so much dignity and honor, he was advised to resign his position in the Senate and appeal his case to the Legislature of Massachusetts, which was then in session. But the great Senator turning quickly in his chair and facing the prominent gentleman who gave him the advice, said, with some severity of tone, "That, sir, would be an act of demagogism unworthy of a Senator." These were the words of wisdom from a man who severely felt the sting of injustice from the administration Senators. He had ten times greater cause to resign than Senator Conkling, but he could not stoop so low to vent his spite. Charles Sumner had a deep sense of honor and had too much respect for the great position he held to act the part of a mad boy, but Roscoe Conkling has not.

WILD WITH JOY.

Special to the Gazette. ALBANY, May 18.—Judge Robertson's confirmation caused the wildest excitement and great rejoicing. When the news was received the Senate adjourned.

ROBERTSON CONFIRMED.

Special to the Gazette. WASHINGTON, May 18.—The Senate went into executive session this afternoon, when Robertson was confirmed, only 5 votes being cast against him. General Merritt was confirmed as consul general to London. General Bachevalier's nomination as minister to Denmark, was withdrawn.

TWO HUNDRED MORE.

Special to the Gazette. WASHINGTON, May 18.—The Senate took a recess for one hour to-day, and sent a committee to the President to ask him what further communications he had to offer. The committee reported on the reassembling of the Senate that the President had about two hundred more nominations to make.

Stephen A. Hurlbut, of Illinois, has been nominated as minister to Peru, vice Christianity resigned.

FEELING IN NEW YORK. The Resignation and Re-election of Conkling the Universal Topic of Conversation.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The resignation of the two Senators continued to be the topic of conversation to-day. The supporters of Conkling, and men who have in past been recognized stalwarts, were very reticent, and few of them could be found who would talk for publication.

Mr. Platt was early at his office in the United States express building. He said he was attending to business and had nothing to add to his letter read in the Legislature.

Friends of the administration are impressed with the idea that Conkling has been thoroughly crushed, and they are jubilant accordingly. His friends, however, are confident that although he may be unsuccessful in this instance, he will not be crushed by any means, and that he will be a great power as ever in the State.

Marshal Fay, whose name was withdrawn from the Senate by the President, returned from Albany to-day. In conversation with a Tribune reporter he was asked what effect the resignation of the Senators was likely to have on the Republican party in this State. "It will not weaken the party. There are no more stalwarts or half-breeds to-day than there were before yesterday."

"Will not Conkling's following be weakened by the course that he has taken?"

"No, it will not. When all the facts relative to the breach between the President and Conkling are laid before the people, there will be but one conclusion to arrive at. Those who are aware of his position, already approve his action, and the Legislature, when it comes to pass on the matter, will do likewise."

"But it is charged that the members of the Legislature are merely his creatures, and that any action of theirs will carry no weight."

"The allegation is absurd. Many of the members have already communicated with their constituents, and others will do so before the question comes before them for action. They all expect to be re-elected, and they will not risk their popularity for the sake of Conkling or any other leader. The people of the State will thus be able to express their sentiments, while the 'half-breeds' will not have an opportunity of influencing the floating vote in the interest of steamship and railroad corporations. The talk about members of the Legislature being creatures of Mr. Conkling's is as I said before, absurd. They are no more his creatures than the members of every caucus, convention, and deliberate assembly in which he appears. Conkling's uprightness and ability command respect wherever he is brought in contact with men and he by his own force of character became a leader. You might as well call the members of the United States Senate his creatures as the members of the Legislature."

"Is there not danger that he may not be re-elected?"

"None whatever. He will be re-elected beyond any doubt, but it is a serious question whether he will accept a re-election."

"There is some talk of other candidates, and among the possible ones mentioned is Governor Cornell. Do you think the Governor will be a candidate?"

"I do not think anything about it. I know Governor Cornell will not be a candidate. I also know that he is a firm and trusted friend to Conkling, and also know that he will be the leader of the stalwart element in the State, which recognizes Conkling as its National leader."

THE WHITE HOUSE.

What the President Says—Blaine Would Like to Continue Conkling in Retirement—Opposition in the Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—There was a large number of callers at the White House to-day, intent upon seeing the President as to the absorbing New York complications. Not all had an opportunity, as the number was too large. Among the earliest callers were several Senators, who came to talk over the peculiar situation and its relations to the Senate and of the capital. The President told them, as he has told others, that he could not undertake to advise them as to matters of adjournment, etc.; that they could do as might seem best and he would be satisfied. He does not, as has been intimated, urge Senators to confirm Robertson at once, but he advises that they take their own course. The President is not particular whether Senators adjourn this week or remain longer, but he hopes that they will act upon such nominations as he sends them without great delay. He desires that Senators should pass upon all nominations before adjournment.

Several administration Senators at the White House to-day, intimated that there might be an outlook for turn of affairs at Albany by the rejection of both Conkling and Platt, and the re-election of other Republicans. It is no secret that such a consummation is devoutly wished in administration circles, as it would be regarded as a very wholesome lesson.

A prominent Republican at the White House to-day said that the New York Senators were taking great risks, especially Platt, who only got through before by a tight squeeze, and through the help of Senator Robertson and Robertson's friends. In short, he could not have been elected had it not been for the support of Robertson. Of course this support will now be thrown in another's favor. Platt, a prominent Republican said, is not a strong man, and one whose elements of opposition could easily be united. As to Conkling, there is little doubt expressed even in administration circles, but what he will be re-elected, his power is acknowledged even by those who do not like his methods. Still, there is much talk here about making some sort of a combination with Democrats by which the wish of the Republican party could be defeated. If Conkling and Platt should not be re-elected, and others should be sent here to fill their places, it would be regarded by many Republicans close to the White House as a fitting termination to the whole business. It is believed that Secretary Blaine could see this happen without a pang of sorrow, but the cabinet is somewhat divided upon this question. While Blaine would do all he could to continue these illustrious ex-Senators in the shade of private life voluntarily sought, James will do all he can to bring them back. James is as zealously for Conkling and Platt as Blaine is against them. In a cabinet where all the alleged factions of the party are represented, such an illustration of cross purposes is to be expected, but there is no mistaking the fact that Platt will not relish being cut off at the very beginning of his term. He has just bought a $300,000 house here, and was preparing to make it his home.

INGERSOLL'S OPINION.

What the Stalwart Man and Eloquent Lecturer Says of the Situation.

CHICAGO, May 18.—A Tribune representative called at the Grand Pacific hotel last evening on Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, who was found in his room in the company of a number of friends. After listening for some time to "Pope Bob," who was in his best humor, leading and listening to a witty conversation on his experiences with the Maryland courts, devils, damnation, and the latter-day religion, the reporter introduced the subject of the Conkling sensation, which resulted in the following interview, which is given verbatim:

"What do you think," asked the reporter, "of the recent action of Senators Platt and Conkling in resigning their seats in the Senate, especially with reference to Conkling?"

"How on earth did you happen to reverse the names in your question? I suppose you intended to say Conkling and Platt. To tell you the truth, I have not thought much about this matter, but what little I have thought has forced me to the conclusion that nothing could have been further from wisdom than the resignations of these Senators. The resignation settles nothing, and a re-election will leave the gentlemen just where they were. It seems to me that the President is ahead, and that Mr. Conkling has made the smallest effort of his life. Mr. Platt went with him just for company, and he may come back without him. Conkling has risked everything without the slightest chance of improving his position. If he should fail in the Legislature, the last end of that man will be worse than the first. Of course I do not know all he may have suffered. He had a hard time during Hayes' administration, and at that time I was on Conkling's side, but that was because I disliked Hayes. If Mr. Conkling will think over his speeches during the last campaign, he will remember that he did not take any particular pains to say good and kind things of General Garfield. He will see that he took pains not to mention the name of the Republican candidate, and then I think he will be compelled to admit that the debt of gratitude coming from the President to him is exceedingly small. Thousands of people notice that neither Conkling nor General Grant, in their speeches at Warren, even mentioned Garfield's name. After all, there is a good deal of human nature in a President. It may be that General Garfield did not notice this."

ARCHBISHOP HENNI.

MILWAUKEE, May 17.—Archbishop Henni is very ill and cannot live many days longer. His condition to-night is somewhat improved, but he is growing very weak, and his death may be expected at any time.

MRS. GARFIELD'S ILLNESS.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Mrs. Garfield's physician furnishes the following bulletin dated 9 a. m.: Mrs. Garfield's condition is more favorable to-day than yesterday. There is less fever and delirium. She passed a comparatively comfortable day thus far. S. A. BOYNTON.

RUSSIA.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—The Czar is said to have nearly perished by poison on the 12th inst. One of the palace scullions, arrested since, had sprinkled arsenic over a bowl of salad, of which Alexander is known to be very fond. As the dish did not figure on the menu, the attempt was detected. On the day previous the Emperor received an invitation to his own funeral.

THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

The Secretary—Their First Visit to the State Institutions.

MADISON, May 17.—The board of control of the State charitable and penal institutions met again to-day and elected M. C. Patton, of Fond du Lac, secretary, with a salary of $1,500 per year. The board will make visits as follows: Delavan on the 7th of June; Janesville, 8th; Waukesha, 9th; Oshkosh, 10th; Waupun, 11th; Madison, 14th.

AN EMINENT JUDGE.

CINCINNATI, May 17.—After a lingering fight for life for months, Judge Burgoyne of this city, died this afternoon, aged 80 years. Thus ended a remarkable career. During his life Judge Burgoyne served under no less than thirteen commissions from Governors of Ohio. Of this number four were military. While on the common pleas bench of Cincinnati he secured the appointment of William Henry Harrison as clerk, and in after years was largely instrumental in securing his nomination and election to the Presidency of the United States. His career on the bench was rendered conspicuous by a decision which gave him no inconsiderable distinction in after life. He it was who first pronounced from the bench the unconstitutionality of the fugitive slave law.
